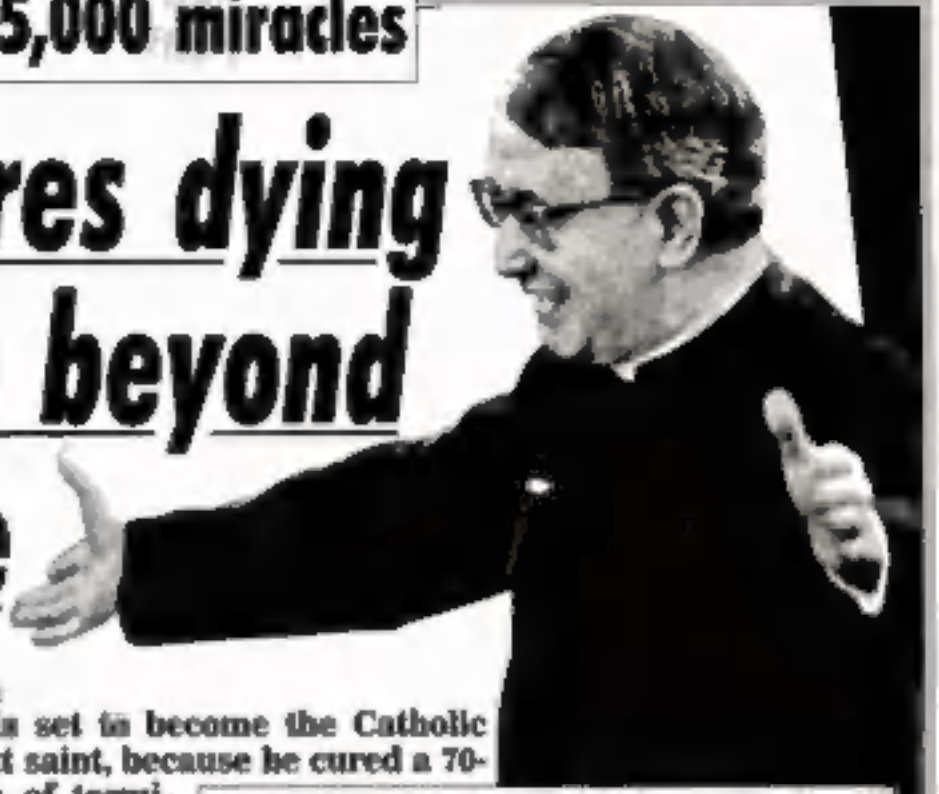
Priest cures dying nun from beyond the grave

TERMINALLY ILL Sister Conception made a miraculous recovery.



Now the Vatican wants to make him a saint!

GLOBAL NEWS SERVICE

A priest is set to become the Catholic Church's next saint, because he cured a 70-year-old nun of terminal cancer — a full year after he died!

Monsignor Escriva de Balaguer will be canonized this fall, Vatican officials announced.

A remarkable 75,000 miracles have been attributed to the priest, who died June 26, 1975, at the age of 73.

But his sainthood was assured when experts studied the nun's incredible recovery — and could find no medical reason for it.

"All my fellow doctors who investigated the case with me were stunned," declared oncologist Dr. Fernando Munoz.

"We could not find any scientific explanation for her complete recovery. This is a case that will go down in history."

devoted nun who prayed constantly with Father de Balaguer while he was alive.

In June 1976, a year after he had passed away, she was dying of a cancer that had left an orange-size tumor in her shoulder, and was further weakened by anemia, a stomach ulcer and a hernia.

When her doctor told her she had only days to live, she calmly accepted her fate.

But the nun's flesh-and-blood sisters Josephina and Carmen, who had been praying to the late Father de Balaguer for months — pleading with him to ask God to spare their sister — refused to give up hope. And one morning after they'd prayed all night for their sister's recovery, the miracle occurred.

up and felt much better," said her physician, Dr. Jose Wangueman.

"It was then that she realized the tumor had disappeared."

And a few days later, she visited Dr Munoz — who found nothing!

"I can't explain it in medical terms, but when I examined her I was astounded to find she was free of the cancer," Dr. Munoz said.

Incredibly, doctors discovered that the other ailments she had suffered from had also disappeared.

Sister Concepcion lived for another 12 years before dying on Nov. 2, 1988, from unrelated kidney failure.

THE REMARKABLE Monsignor Escriva de Balaguer performed over 75,000 miracles during his lifetime, and continues to perform them from beyond the grave.

UFOs BUZZ EIFFEL TOWER

PARIS — A pair of shimmering, saucer-shaped UFOs buzzed the Eiffel Tower for 17 minutes on the morning of April 7 while thousands of flabbergasted eyewitnesses watched.

Dramatic photographs clearly show the strange starships glowing brightly against the overcast, early-morning sky.

And far from being fakes or artistic recreations, the photographs were shot by French Police Lt. Jan Jarnert — and analysts confirm that they haven't been altered or retouched in any way.

Military authorities remain tight-lipped about the incident. But military insiders admit that jets were scrambled in a futile bid to intercept the UFOs, which reportedly performed a series of seemingly impossible midair maneuvers before they vanished into thin air.

"This has to be one of the most spectacular UFO sightings ever documented," said Michael Gerrold, an independent UFO researcher and publisher of Europe's premier UFO magazine, Extraterrestrial Report.

"The military has been forced to maintain official silence to avoid a public panic. But thousands of people saw the UFOs with their own eyes. And the big questions now are what were these starships doing here — and where did they come from?"

"Unless they return and give us more to go on, I'm afraid we'll never

Girl Scout conquers panic to save her little brother from a horrible death!

CONYERS, Ga. — A hike through the woods on a wintery day almost took a tragic turn when tiny Seth Crow slipped down a muddy, 10-foot bank into a deep pool of murky water.

Scared, crying and freezing cold, the 6-year-old might have died right there if not for the heroics of his 8-year-old sister Katybeth.

"Seth," she yelled, as her little brother struggled to swim in the freezing stream, but couldn't because his water-logged clothes kept dragging him under.

Terrified Katybeth peered to unpeel roots at the water's edge. "Grab them," she screamed.

Struggling Seth reached for the roots, but his hand slipped and he disappeared briefly underwater.

"Somebody please help us," the frantic sister pleaded. But there was nobody close enough to hear her. Whether her beloved little brother lived or died was up to her — and no one else.

Her first thought was to run for help until she recalled a lesson learned in earning her Girl Scout safety badge — never leave someone in danger.

water. "Grab the stick," she pleaded.

The desperate youngster grabbed the stick on the third try and his gutsy sister slowly pulled him closer to shore until she could reach out and fling him up the bank.

Seth collapsed on the creek bank, his eyes closed.

Katybeth raced through the forest until she saw her mom, Donna, and brother, Carey, who had already started looking for their pal Seth.

"Mama, Seth fell in the water. I got him out, but he's not moving," she cried.

When they reached Seth, he was motionless and covered with mud.

"Seth, babe, are you all right," the worried mother whispered.

"Yes, mama," Seth replied. "Katybeth pulled me out of the water."

The ordeal aggravated Seth's asthma and caused a lung infection, but there were no lasting effects.

Katybeth, who won a National Girl Scout Medal of Honor, is modest about her heroics.

"I was afraid but I had to save him. He's my little brother," she remarked.

Mrs. Crow said the experience has made Seth and Katybeth even closer than they were before.

"Katybeth seems to have a lot more confidence than before," said the thankful mom. "This hero talk hasn't gone to her head. She just knows it all."

Top psychologist reveals:

3 key traits that separate successful people from failures!

Three key traits distinguish successful people from failures, according to noted psychologist Gary Emery:

1 Successful people accept responsibility for their own actions, while failures blame others for their problems, or make up excuses.

"We've all, at one time or another, sought the 'easy' way out of an unfinished task," said Dr. Emery.

"For example, you tell your boss you'll have a job done by a certain deadline — and you don't. You blame the weather for making you late, or blame a co-worker for not completing his part of the assignment. Those are failure responses.

"Don't promise your boss you'll complete an assignment unless you are prepared to move Heaven and Earth to do it. And if you do fall short on a promise, be prepared to stand up and admit to yourself, your boss and the world that you and only you are responsible.

"Get in the habit of saying: 'Yes, it was my fault. I did it. But I'll start fixing the situation right now.'"

2 Successful people learn from their mistakes, instead of accepting mistakes as simply another indication of their own incompetence.

"Successful people use mistakes as a learning tool. They say: 'I'm not going to let the same dog bite me twice.'

"But the failure says: 'I must be incompetent. I must be useless. I made another mistake. I'm hopeless.'

"Use your mistakes as a stepping-stone to becoming more efficient.

"Try to get in the habit of saying: 'I just learned how NOT to do that task. Next time, I will know better.'"

3 Successful people are eager to find new, improved ways to get things done, while failures cling to old habits.

"Be creative," Dr. Emery urged. "Look for ways to do it better, to make life easier and more profitable for you, your boss or your family.

"Practice these three key traits, and you'll be on the road to success."

SALZBURG, Austria — Luckless do-it-yourselfer Hans Pender was plastering his den with wallpaper when he got so tangled up in the sticky stuff he couldn't breathe — and died of suffocation!

"When we got there, we found Mr. Pender's body wrapped up like a mummy in heavy beige and white wallpaper," said Police Detective Peter Dieker.

"The scene was so bizarre, at first we suspected foul play. But eventually it became clear that Mr. Pender simply got about 40 feet of paper wrapped around him so tight that he couldn't get out.

"It was a situation where the more he struggled, the tighter the paper wrapped him up — until literally his oxygen supply was cut off and he died an agonizing death."

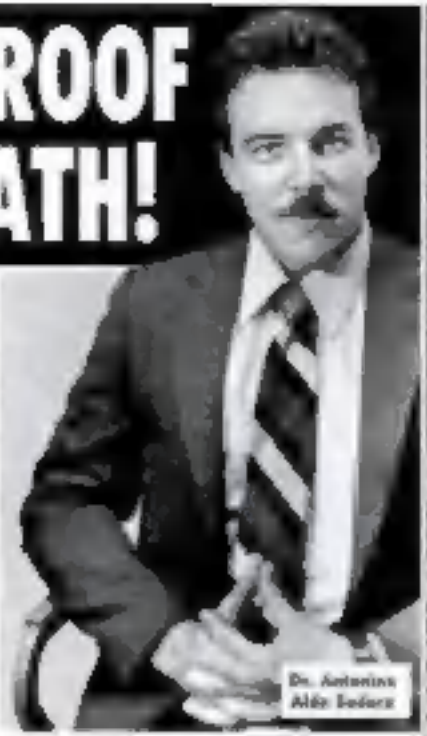
SURGEON FINDS PROOF OF LIFE AFTER DEATH!



ROME, Italy — A top surgeon has interviewed dozens of people who've nearly died — and he's convinced there is life after death.

"I have no doubt that our life doesn't end with our death — and I've got scientific evidence to prove it," declared Dr. Antonino Aldo Sodaro.

According to his research, 40 percent of people who reach the threshold of death undergo a near-death experience (NDE) in which they leave their bodies during a medical crisis.

He's also discovered that people pass through four distinct phases during NDEs — a sense of calmness when they realize they're dead, floating outside their body, being drawn to a heavenly light, and resisting the light's pull to stay on Earth.

'My patients came out of surgery and told of being drawn to a heavenly light'

Dr. Sodaro, chief surgeon at Rome's main public hospital and also a surgery professor at Rome University, has hypnotized and interviewed more than 30 patients about their near-death experiences.

"Hypnosis excludes the possibility that their recollections may be made up," he said.

One young man was killed in a car crash. He saw his lifeless body trapped in the twisted wreck of the car.

"He didn't understand the desperation of the people around it. He felt absolutely calm and relaxed. Then he felt attracted by a benevolent light and started going toward it.

"On his way to the light, he met his late grandfather who was with a woman he didn't know. They both told him, 'It's not time for you to come here yet. Go back in your life. They are waiting for you.'

"The young man wanted to carry on, but they convinced him to abandon himself to the force pulling him back toward Earth.

"When he 'resuscitated' and described his encounter with his grandfather and the woman, residents who'd come out of their homes and gathered at the accident scene recognized his description of the woman as one of their neighbors.

"When they went to her house to tell her about the extraordinary encounter, they found the woman lying dead in her bed."

Another of Dr. Sodaro's patients went into cardiac arrest while he was having a pacemaker implanted.

"He told me later that while he watched us desperately trying to resuscitate him on the operating table, he was frantically trying to tell us to leave him alone," Dr. Sodaro recalled.

"When we succeeded in bringing him back to life, his first words were, 'What the hell did you do that for? You have snatched me from paradise.'"

Everyone is happy when they go through an NDE — except people who've tried to commit suicide.

"They feel strong anxiety and deep sadness.

"But when they've brought back they generally have a much more positive attitude to life and never try to commit suicide again," Dr. Sodaro said.

"All NDE subjects improve their spiritual and social lives. They become more generous, optimistic and passive.

"They know that this life is

Listening to static helps babies sleep

Radio static is better than a lullaby to lull a baby to sleep, according to a new report from the Better Sleep Council.

The repetitive, monotonous "white noise" of static is music to an infant's ears and relaxes a tired tot the same way the sound of a car engine traveling at high speed or a room fan does.

"Repetitious noise at a moderately intense volume has a calming effect on infants," says psychologist Dr. Michael Levy, author of the report.

272 POUNDS!

World's BIGGEST baby

BRAND-NEW RECORD!

2 year old stands 4-foot-6

He weighed 24 pounds at birth

by BEATRICE DEXTER

HONOLULU, Hawaii — Pound for pound, whopper tot "Rocky" Carrone is America's top 2 year old. The beefy babe weighs more than any kid his age in the country — an incredible 272 pounds!

"They say that he holds the world record for biggest baby, but that hasn't been confirmed yet," said the baby's proud mom, Denise Marie Carrone. "I don't care whether he's a celebrity or not. I love him for himself, all 272 pounds of him."

Round-faced Rocky, whose real name is Salvatore, was born Sept. 12, 1992. At birth he was already a meaty nine, weighing in at a robust 24 pounds. By the time he was a month old he'd doubled his birth weight and he's been layering on the poun since.

What's more, his height is keeping pace with his girth — he already stands 4-foot-8 and he's not yet 3 years old.

"The doctors say Rocky is an unusually ripe grower, but that there's nothing abnormal about him," says Marie. "He certainly has an enormous appetite. He eats nine bowls of Cheerios every day while he watches TV."

Little Rocky learned to walk a few months ago, but he's already wearing size 6 sweaters. Mom makes homemade super-size cloth diapers for the big and tent-sized shirts and pants are the only clothes that fit him.

Since Rocky is too big for a stroller, Marie puts him to the work in his red wagon. And he's a trouble for in the car wearing a regular belt because he can't fit into a baby seat. "People always turn and stare whenever I take him out," Marie says. "They can tell he's just a baby, yet he's almost the size of an adult. It knocks their socks off."

While roly-poly Rocky enjoys the friendly attention, his weight is not always an advantage. The kids in the neighborhood are not allowed to play with Rocky because the giants [illegible] intimidate and nearly suffocated him. And two months ago he became wedged in his swing and his mom had to call 911 for help getting him free.

Keeping the toddler in line is a bit of a challenge for Marie. His weight and size make it difficult for the petite mother to discipline him and when he throws a temper tantrum he is downright dangerous.

"I have to offer him a Snickers bar to take his mind off what's bothering him, because I'm not small to restrain him," Marie says. "I don't know what I'm going to do when he gets older."

The baby behemoth's mother says she's already had calls from folks who want her to appear in the Guinness Book of Records about her son. They say the boy is even larger than the most recent world champion big baby, Adam Zolten Lou Rayburn, who lost the title this year when doctors forced her to lose 142 of her 700 pounds. "I think it would be neat if Rocky was a world champion," says Marie, 25.

Here's what the whopper tot eats:

Rocky's mom says her tiny tyke is a big eater — and she's not kidding! Here's a list of the hunk the King Kong kid eats in just one day.

BREAKFAST: Three eggs, scrambled with butter. Eight to 10 slices of crisp bacon. One cantaloupe. Six slices of whole wheat toast, with butter and marmalade. Two to four pancakes with lots of syrup. One quart of orange juice.

MID-MORNING SNACK: Five bowls of Cheerios with half-and-half. Several apples or fresh peaches. One liter of cola or orange soda.

LUNCH: Three hot dogs, two to four hot dogs, one pint baked beans, king-size bag of potato chips, one liter soda, cola and ice cream, half dozen cookies.

MOM Marie Carrone.

MID-AFTERNOON SNACK: Two peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, six to eight cookies, one quart milk, large bag popcorn.

DINNER: Two roast chickens, mashed potatoes and gravy, stuffing. Five ears of sweet corn with pieces of butter. Six to eight biscuits or rolls with butter and honey. One-quarter apple or cherry pie with ice cream. One and one-half quarts of milk.

BEDTIME SNACK: Four bowls of Cheerios with half-and-half. Three tomatoes with peanut butter. Four cups of cocoa with marshmallows.

Instead of trudging down to the post office and standing in line to buy a three-cent stamp, the unidentified customer of Liberty Loan Co. taped three pennies next to an old 29-cent stamp and dropped it in the mailbox.

And sure enough, the letter was delivered to its destination in Buffalo, N.Y.

"It's a one in a million kind of thing," stunned postal official Victor Landisio said.

Surprisingly, the rollers on the sorting machine didn't detect the pennies and the carrier probably just failed to notice them, Landisio said.

London tabloid: Hollywood's top hunk, Brad Pitt, makes shocking pledge:

I'LL GIVE GAY SONGBIRD A BABY!

DREAMBOAT Hunk Brad Pitt is willing to donate sperm to Melissa Etheridge, left, and Julie Cypher. He'll donate sperm so the lesbians can have a baby Hollywood hunk Brad Pitt, the sexiest man alive, has agreed to help gay rocker Melissa Etheridge and her lover have a baby.

The 31-year-old dream guy has consented to donate sperm to Melissa's live-in companion Julie Cypher, the former wife of Young Guns star Lou Diamond Phillips.

"One night a few of the lesbians were in the gym watching the guys play basketball," recalls Melissa.

"We were staring at Brad and we all agreed he could charm a woman's mind."

So Melissa asked Brad for a big favor, and since he's still interested in starting a family of his own, he said yes. "I'm a mess when it comes to women," Brad admits. "I'd love to settle down as it ticked pink. "Now, I'm just

"But that's because I do more than anybody else ever has. If you want to see my involvement, look at the episodes when I wasn't on, when I was in bed. When I leave these boy writers to themselves, you can see what happens. Then they do a little bow-wow, and then they are fired.

Jennifer recently axed executive producer Bob Daly and the dead season, she says. "He said he could no longer write for my show if I didn't speak calmly with him. The war was on. It was over."

Princess Diana is being driven to despair by the pack of paparazzi that photographs her every move.

On a recent ski trip to Austria with her sons William and Harry, the Princess wailed, "I feel they are raping me.

"I just don't know what to do."

The Princess confided in a British journalist and told him that her life was a nightmare — because she's followed everywhere by cameras.

"When I go back to my hotel room each afternoon, all the windows of my apartment are surrounded by photographers looking in at me. I close the curtains but they are there. I know it's hell."

Is the trial of the century turning into a shaggy dog story? "Everything you touch in this case has something to do with a dog," says writer John Cargill, who's covering the O.J. Simpson circus for Dog World magazine.

"Name another case where there were so many witnesses, murder victims and suspects that were all involved with dogs. I can't think of one," says Cargill, an Akita owner.

SIMPSON TRIAL: Going to the dogs!

The guy has a point. First there's Nicole's Akita Kato who fed witnesses to the scene of the crime.

Then there's O.J.'s Akita Chachi, who growled police when they jumped over the fence at his place. And then there's the golden retriever Nopa Lopez was walking when she says she spotted the white Bronco parked outside Simpson's house. "There are more dogs in this case than you can shake a stick at," says Cargill.

Bad boy Johnny Depp played a cross-dressing B movie director in Ed Wood, now back in theaters.

But it was just play acting — Depp says he's never had a sexual experience with another man.

"If I were a homosexual, I'm sure I would fall in love with director John Waters in about half a second because he is one of the funniest, most charming, intelligent people that I've ever known. He is really a prime catch."

Waters, who worked with Depp in the 1988 film Cry-Baby, was flattered when told of Depp's feeling for him, though he does say that there is "too much of an age difference" for them to ever be a couple.

"Johnny is the most honorable human boy I have ever met," says Waters.

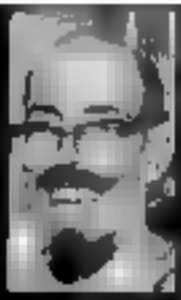
LEAN & MEAN



LARRY MINAR

World's skinniest man meets world's 2nd skinniest!

ANNISTON, Ala. — Bony bartender Larry Minar figured his pip-squeak physique qualified him as the scrawniest man on the planet — till he met the real prince of puny, toothpick Phillip Bryant!

By JOE BERGER

"I never thought there was anybody as skinny as me," said laid-back Larry, 46. "I guess I was wrong."

As you may recall, Bennish also Phil — all 6 feet, 5 inches and 110 pounds of him — was selected from thousands of emaciated entrants as Flabby World News' Mr. Puny contest last summer.

And radiowaves Larry — checking in at 5 feet, 1 inch and a gaping 84 pounds — was named runner-up for the Puny title prize. But the two men had never met — in person, and flabbergasted Larry just didn't believe there was anybody anywhere who was as lean and mean as he was.

So the bony pacheer left his hometown of Frankenmouth, Mich., and traveled to Anniston to see for himself.

"Larry just came in from one day and shocked up where I work," said the reigning sultan of skinny, who runs a jewelry business here.

"He said it didn't seem like anybody as bony as him, he wanted to meet the guy face to face."

That night, the unsuspecting citizens of Anniston were treated to a spectacle of truly puny proportions as these two rickety contenders bumped their way through town —

RIVALS Phil and Larry seem unable to determine who is the weakest.

ZOO-ICIDE!

D.C. woman leaps into lions' cage!

'Her fingers were chewed off and her face unrecognizable!'

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — A woman half-beat up a 6½-foot fence, skimmed down a nine-foot wall and swam across a 10-foot moat — to be mauled and mutilated almost beyond recognition by two Siberian lions.

The partially devoured body of Margaret Davis King, 34, was discovered in the lions' compound at the National Zoo.

She had been chewed and mauled by a [redacted] male lion named Tony and a 350 pound female named Asha.

"She died to death after being bitten on the back of her neck by one of the lions," police officer Robert Bennett explained.

"Her fingers were practically chewed off and her face was almost unrecognizable."

Cops identified the slain person victim by comparing a photo on an ID card found on her battered body with "what was left of her face," Officer Bennett said.

The mangled body was found about 7 a.m. on the second level of the outdoor Lion House by an animal keeper who helped other zoo employees coax the lions into an enclosed area.

"We're still wrapping up some loose ends, but everything indicates it's a suicide," Police Sgt. Joe Castillo said. "The medical examiner has ruled her death a suicide."

Zoo spokesman Robert J. Hoage said, "It is almost impossible to fall into one of these animal enclosures."

There was no evidence anyone had killed the woman

Cops said the woman carried ID from the Central Arkansas Transit system in Little Rock, but her most recent address was a motel here.

MY AMERICA

Ban breast-feeding in public — it's disgusting!

...udder than a baby with an empty ... over all these dizzy new moms who've suddenly started breast-feeding their brats right out in public — and even on the job, for crying out loud!

Well, folks, I'm here to tell you that it just ain't natural for a woman to breast-feed in front of God and everybody — and any woman who does it should be arrested on the spot.

You heard me right. They ought to be arrested and thrown in jail with all the other common criminals by gunpoint.

One of the big reasons the modern-day baby battle was ignited was to prevent women from breast-feeding. Everybody knows that.

If a new mom wants to breast-feed her baby, she has plenty of time to do it in the hospital before they both go home.

My dear old mother — God rest her soul — didn't think for one minute about breast-feeding me, because she had more sense than that — and she knew it'd take too much time away from her housework and laundry.

And if my daddy had EVER seen Mom breast-feeding me in public, he'd have paddled her good, that's for sure.

But what ripped me so right now is that most gals who breast-feed nuts out in the open are ugly or fat — or both. [illegible] Thick's why. And that makes [illegible] of the world [illegible] quaking.

It [illegible] wants to [illegible] up first!

Watch one of these modern [illegible] experts operate for a while and you'll never drink a glass of milk again.

[illegible] but it [illegible] breast-feed a baby [illegible] at home and [illegible] your family [illegible]

[illegible]

In study after study [illegible] it's been proven that women who breast-feed their kids for more than two weeks after birth are emotionally unstable.

In other words [illegible] so stunted [illegible] all the time that they turn into nuisances who want the baby hanging on them 24 hours a day.

Ugly, sick — they have no idea how it's affecting others when they can see your breast feeding. It's like hanging around the back door of a meat market.

ANCHOR GAL and mom Deborah Norville breast-feeds her baby.

ED ANGER BREAST-FEEDING POLL

☐ YES. I agree with Ed that breast-feeding is a disgusting practice that should be done in the private of one's own home — not where people might be victimized by it!

☐ NO! Ed's dead wrong. Breast-feeding is perfectly natural and women should be able to do it anywhere they want to.

Government bigwig: Let's issue licenses to burglars!

CARACAS, Venezuela — A noted economist has come up with a shocking new way to help revitalize this country's wealth: "Legalized burglary!"

Carlos Caldera, a government financial advisor, hopes to get a bill passed by 1998 that will allow each state to issue a limited number of "Official Burglar" licenses.

The documents will give the bearers permission to break into the homes and businesses of rich people and steal.

If they're not caught in the act, they will be allowed to keep half the money.

The other half will go into a fund to feed and clothe the poor.

"This country has only two classes," says Caldera, "the very rich and the very poor.

"Legalized burglary will provide work to unemployed people whose only skills are breaking and entering.

"At the same time, the rich will have to hire more guards, buy more alarms and fences.

"That will bolster the security business and provide more jobs."

Caldera stresses that the program will be very closely monitored.

"Licensed burglars will have to declare their earnings accurately and honestly or face heavy prison terms. The victims will be limited to persons and businesses with incomes over $8 million — and there are plenty of them here — and the burglar will only be allowed to steal $1 million in cash, jewelry or other assets."

Although most Venezuelans are outraged, many support the idea.

"They're going to steal anyway," said Juan Ignacio, an official from Merida.

"We might as well legalize it."

AMERICA'S SECRET WEAPON AGAINST IRAQ — GIRLIE MAGS!

MOST magazines like Playboy are forbidden in Iraq.

Bombarding Baghdad with sexy pictures will cause religious rioting, CIA says

By TEDDY GERALD / Weekly World News

WASHINGTON — The CIA has hatched a top-secret scheme to bring riots and chaos to the streets of Baghdad, Iraq, by bombing unsuspecting citizens — with millions of girlie magazines!

A source within the intelligence agency said the bizarre plan has been approved by the White House and that planes could begin bombarding the Iraqi capital with racy magazines as early as next week.

"Iraq is run by a bunch of rotting, raving religious fanatics who'd rather read anything even slightly suggestive is enough to get you hanged," said the source, a high ranking member of a CIA covert-operations detail.

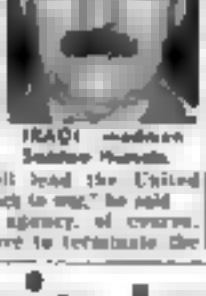
"Most men there never even get a peek at a strange woman's ankles, much less a magazine full of naked girls — but that doesn't mean they're not interested," he said. "Men are men the world over, right?

"So when millions of girlie mags coming raining down on the city, there's going to be chaos and confusion like nothing you've ever seen before. Thousands upon thousands of men will be scrambling to collect the magazines as souvenirs while thousands more scramble to destroy them in the name of Allah.

"The rioting and breaking that result should be a delight to anyone who has witnessed the atrocities committed by that idiot Saddam Hussein."

The operative said the girlie magazine offensive is just one of several "distractions" planned by the CIA to disrupt Saddam's war effort in the Persian Gulf.

"The intelligence community is well aware that Hussein is gearing up for another assault on Kuwait, and that could very well lead the United States back to war," he said.



IRAQI president Saddam Hussein.

"The agency, of course, would love to terminate the [illegible] and put an end to the war-mongering once and for all. The White House is a little too squeamish for anything quite so permanent, so we've undertaken a series of operations designed to divert Hussein's attentions and resources.

"In other words, we're going to give him so much grief he won't have time to think about starting another war. And it's always possible that with a little CIA encouragement, Iraq's Muslim fundamentalist society will simply self-destruct and Saddam Hussein will be just a bad memory."

The source said he was leaking details of the super secret operation to Weekly World News to help fend off criticism that the CIA has become useless and outmoded since the fall of Communism.

"There are members of Congress who would love to cut CIA funding to the bone in the misguided belief that with the waning of the Cold War, the agency is no longer needed," he said.

"I want Americans to be aware that the CIA is still out there fighting the forces that would destroy everything this country stands for."

Queen Victoria smoked marijuana

DOCTORS prescribed marijuana for the Queen to relieve her menstrual cramps

... and other fascinating facts

By JOHN DAVIS

The windiest city in the U.S. isn't Chicago — it's Fargo, N. Dakota, where winds average 14.4 m.p.h. Chicago winds average only 10.8 m.p.h.

Here are some other unusual facts from Scot Morris' fascinating book The Emperor Who Ate The Bible And Other Strange Facts

● Changing lanes won't get you to your destination much quicker, according to a Los Angeles police study.

Four cars traveled 10 miles in traffic on the Hollywood Freeway. One was allowed to dart back and forth between lanes. The others couldn't.

The result? The speed demon finished only 47 seconds ahead of the slowest vehicle.

The doctors find that is the only form of nourishment the stomach can hold after an operation.

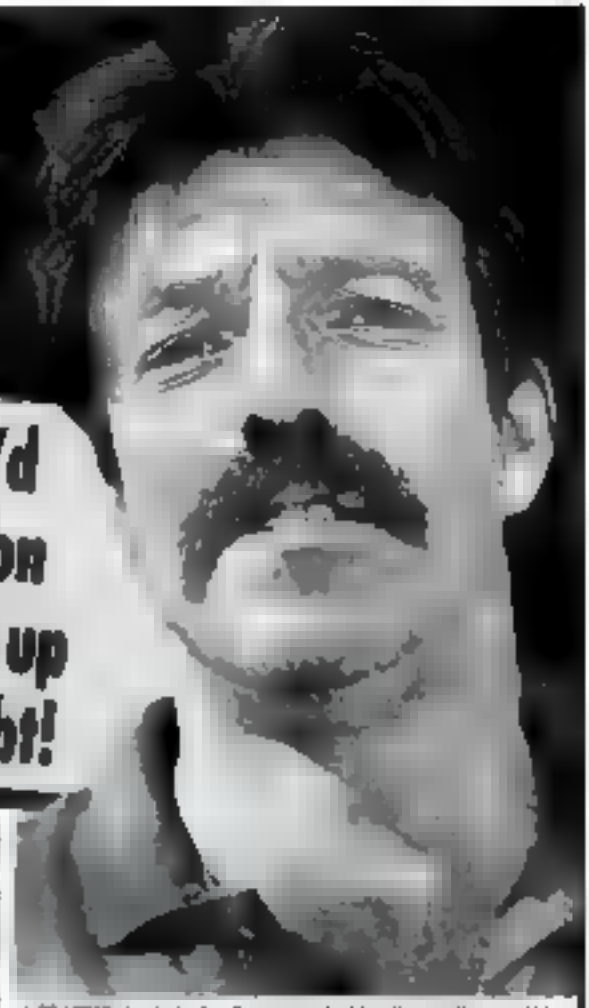
MAN SUES PALS OVER LOTTERY PRANK!

He thought he'd won $7.2 million . . . but wound up $239,000 in debt!



A PRACTICAL joke by Roy Perryman's buddies (hopefully) ruined him

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A couple of friends played a prank on Roy Perryman by giving him a fake lottery ticket he thought was worth $7.2 million — but the joke went terribly wrong when he celebrated by going on a wild spending spree that left him more than $239,000 in debt!

By LYMAN TATE
Weekly World News

By the time Perryman realized what was going on, he'd signed eight forms to buy a brand new $59,000 Cadillac, a Corvette, a plush hotel suite and a 52,000 flat screen TV, mailed $7,000 in bum checks to settle his credit card accounts, and made a [illegible] $175,000 down payment on an enormous mansion.

Mr. Perryman has been named in the suit by those he considers arch-foes, which says his lawyer, who expects to file the suit in the next few weeks.

"And the emotional distress of not actually winning the lottery has caused Mr. Perryman many hours of illness and agony."

The whole ordeal started on a Sunday morning when one of Perryman's friends bought a lottery ticket with numbers matching the winning ones picked the night before in the Saturday drawing. Another friend then switched the ticket with one Perryman had left in his car.

Confidentials

Dear Engaged in Boston: Most men will promise you diamonds and deliver zip. That's the way they are!

Dear Pamela Mae in Bayport: Getting three different women pregnant at the same time hardly qualifies you for "Father of the Year."

Dear disappointed fan in Hastings: You can be generous with your love. But in the age of AIDS, you CAN'T be generous with your lovers ... unless you want to die!

Dear Concerned in Iron City: If you must have that particular medical condition, you probably live in the right city for it!

Dear Cheese in Utica: I know what you mean. If I don't hear half a pound of baloney I'll look awful in my sitting below!

Dear Tempted in Kittery: Don't be a moron. If the girl bored you half as much as her sons he does, he'd divorce his wife!

Dear Dottie: You're not going to believe this, but my vegetarian wife wants to divorce me because she found a couple of rib bones under the front seat of my car.

I respect her feelings about eating meat, and even though I don't share them, I wouldn't dream of chowing down on a steak or pork chop when she's around. I'll admit that I ate some take-out ribs on the way home from work. But I think she's taking this too far. What should I do? — Caught in Quincy

Dear Caught: Vegetarians are worse than reformed alcoholics when it comes to imposing their ideas on other people. With that in mind, I strongly advise you to give the guy the divorce she wants. Then you can eat all the ribs you want, any time you want — and not have to worry about that nightflower breath reaching you the next day.

When I punch my sister my conscience takes a beating!

Dear Dottie: My 36-year-old sister and I have been living together all our lives and, even though we're both adults, in most respects our lives couldn't be better. Our biggest problem is my temper. I'm ashamed to admit it, but if the least little thing doesn't go my way I instantly take it out on Jane — with my fists. Then after I beat her up I feel terrible about it. I've been to a dozen shrinks and remember that they haven't done me a lot of good. I can't go on living guilty all the time, Dottie. What should I do? — Guilty in Wilmington

Dear Guilty: Under normal circumstances I'd tell you to commit murder but in this case Dottie's not the solution. Get your own apartment and leave your sister the poor lady ... before you make a mistake and kill her.

Womanizing ex-husband wants a second chance!

Dear Dottie: My ex-husband and I divorced several years ago and then split on the lines. Unfortunately, he's suddenly decided that we should "have a second go at it," and is sending me to give this another chance. I don't want anything to do with the womanizing jerk but he's persistent — and persuasive. If I don't get rid of him soon, I know I'll give in and take him back. Help me, Dottie, before it's too late! — Desperate in Parlin

Dear Desperate: The solution to your problem is simple. Start dating a REAL man and go SOMEWHERE with him.

My boyfriend of 17 years refuses to marry me!

Dear Dottie: I've been living with a guy for 17 years and to my way of thinking, it's high time we got married. He doesn't agree. And whenever I bring up the subject of marriage, he shrugs it off and says we can discuss it later. Later never comes, of course, and I've just about had it. The problem is, Tim makes a six-figure salary as an engineer and I haven't held a job since I was a girl of 16. How can I make him see the light, Dottie? — Frustrated in Douglas

Dear Frustrated: The last thing you want this man to do is see the light. If he does, you might be exposed for being the shiftless useless user that he's supported for 17 mind-boggling years!

Dottie will answer your letters — and will be able to, best write to her, c/o Weekly World News, 600 Enquirer Center, Boulder, Boulder County, Colorado.

Ask Serena

Should I tell my roommate I slept with her fiance?

Dear Serena: I have done a terrible thing — I slept with my roommate's fiance. He's not even a guy I was ever attracted to, but I had a moment of weakness and found myself in bed with him.

I'm not even sure how it happened. I was always used to him hanging around the apartment and seeing me in my underwear. And he's even seen me undressing topless on one or two occasions — but my roommate and I never thought anything of it. Then one day he came over when my roomie was out of town. Somehow we ended up taking a shower together and before I knew it we were in bed.

Now I feel terrible about what I've done. I'm crazy about my roommate and I don't want to lose her friendship. But I'm also crazy about her fiance and I don't want to lose him either. I'm afraid to tell her the truth because I don't want to hurt her. But I'm also afraid that if I don't tell her, he will. What should I do? — Confused in Cleveland

Dear Confused: Tell her the truth. She and her fiance are a pretty lovely couple and you're the victim of one of those naughty little tricks.

Dear Serena: My 12-year-old daughter wants to be a professional bodybuilder. AIDS tragedy c

By SUSAN JAMESON/Daily writer

LACLEDE, Mo. — Love brought pretty Regina Troyer everything she ever wanted — it's also bringing her an early death.

The courageous 24-year-old woman married the man of her dreams, hemophiliac Duane Troyer, but she caught AIDS from him before he died in September 1992. The couple had a beautiful baby daughter together, but little Sara will be an orphan when AIDS claims Regina a few years from now.

Tragically, although Regina and her family are members of the old-fashioned Mennonite community and live quiet and deeply religious lives, they were not insulated from the horrors of AIDS. Regina lived for her love and now she will die for it, but she has no regrets.

"I just want to stand up and believe there's a purpose in this," she told Weekly World News. "Worry and regret about the past just don't help at all."

"I have a choice: I can be upset or enjoy every day God gives me. I don't just sit around pitying myself. I have to make a life for Sara. I have to make each day count, because I don't have that much left."

The young Mennonite couple met in high school and were married in 1987. Duane was a hemophiliac who had received contaminated blood transfusions during childhood. They practiced safe sex, but Regina became pregnant with Sara shortly after their wedding.

Just before their marriage, Duane underwent a routine blood test. Duane used church congregation to spread the word that he was HIV positive, pray over them and trusted God. Regina knew she was pregnant, but somehow God would cure Duane, he was sure. Duane was virus free. The young newlyweds were delighted that they could have the family they dreamed of. They went ahead and had unprotected sex.

ABOVE: Regina Troyer and her daughter, Sara, both wearing traditional Mennonite clothing, kneel at the grave of Regina's husband Duane.

LIFE MUST GO ON: Tending to her daily chores, Regina works from dawn to dusk to make ends meet.

Doomed couple thought they were safe and secure . . . they were wrong!

BEFORE THE AIDS NIGHTMARE Duane and Regina were a loving couple who never dreamed their lives would be destroyed by AIDS

Little Sara was born in 1991. It was clear Duane had AIDS — and was now seriously ill. And a week after the baby's birth, doctors told Regina she had AIDS, too.

"It just shattered what we thought was our life," Regina said. "It took a while for us even to realize what it all meant. There was just so much sorrow in our joy."

Duane's illness got worse, and by the time his daughter was just 3 months old, he had been hospitalized three times. He was sent home to die. He passed away on Sept. 3, 1992 at the age of 31.

Today Duane's young widow lives on the couple's farm, raising little Sara alone. The child escaped her parents' fate and is AIDS free.

"It's hard to see Sara and to realize Duane didn't get to be with her," said Regina, whose health has been good in spite of the virus that robbed her of her children and her husband. She had always wanted a child. But I had agreed that someday we will all be together again in Heaven.

"My life is a complete joy because of the wonderful person and I am that I have brought Sara into the world. I'm happy for our parenthood years. We had the child we always wanted, and I loved Duane so much."

JURASSIC BARK!

Scientist [redacted] skeleton of prehistoric dog that was 60 feet long

By ANWAR BASARAH

INVERCARGILL, New Zealand — An amateur scientist working on a South Island dig has uncovered one of the most fascinating [redacted] finds ever — the complete skeleton of a Jurassic dog that's 40 feet in height!

The colossal canine roamed the Earth 180 million years ago, according to experts who have examined the remains.

It had a leathery reptilian skin, enormous fangs and sharp, deadly claws, and was a meat-eater and a prodigious killer, paleontologists believe.

"The find has been verified and moved to the University of Auckland," said the discoverer, Dr. Anthony Bowen, 38. "Everybody there is real excited because of the size and the completeness of the beast."

DISCOVERER Dr. Anthony Bowen

They say they have never found anything of a [illegible] proportions [illegible] before. [illegible] and that they were more formidable beasts.

Dr. Bowen, a retired orthodontist, took up the dig as a hobby after reading about the amateur paleontology of [illegible] and has devoted [illegible] searching on Australia and New Zealand looking for fossils.

His discovery of the Jurassic dog, tentatively named Canomorus, occurred in January as he was searching an outcropping of sedimentary rock for the petrified remains of ancient creatures.

"The creature had a very [illegible] head. It was remarkable. Like the [illegible] head of a modern dog," Dr. Bowen said. "It had enormous sharp teeth and bony platelets growing [illegible] its back all the length of the spine and tail.

"The paws on this ancient dog were different from those of the modern version, though.

"Apparently, the creature used its paws more like a raccoon or a monkey might. It could [illegible] with [illegible] paws."

Other [illegible] creatures haunted the jungles and steamy swamps of the Jurassic period, preying on plant-eating reptiles and tiny mammals.

The gargantuan animals probably died out when the dinosaurs mysteriously disappeared at the end of the Mesozoic period, they said.

Weekly World News exclusive: The WORLD'S BIGGEST CROSSWORD!

EMBALMERS FIGHT FOR THE RIGHT TO EAT ON THE JOB!

Funeral home employees nationwide are reacting strongly to a batchelorette proclamation by health officials: Embalmers could be endangering their health — by eating and drinking on the job!

Dr. Robyn Gershon, doctor of public health, studied 130 funeral service directors and decided eating and embalming don't mix.

She has officially recommended that embalmers reduce their on-the-job risk by not eating while they work. The finding has prompted many mortuaries to ban the practice of eating and drinking during the body-preserving process.

Weekly World News asked embalmers nationwide for their reactions to the announcement and the resulting ban. Here are some of their responses:

● "This goes me in a bind. Sometimes I have as many as 10 corpses a day to embalm and I can't stop for a lunch break. If I can't grab a sandwich and eat it at the sink, my productivity will suffer." J. D., Los Angeles

● "Dr. Gershon has some nerve. Where and when I eat is my business. I'm always careful not to let anything fall into the incisions or onto the body. If I want to risk my own health it's nobody's business but mine." R. K., Seattle, Wash.

● "I'd never eat while I work anyway. That's disgusting. But I do reserve the right to drink my coffee. The aroma of fresh coffee helps kill the formaldehyde smell." T. G., Dayton, Ohio

● "They'll never stop us from eating. It's too widespread. Virtually every embalmer I know eats on the job. It sounds gross to people who aren't in the business. But when you work with bodies every day it's just no big deal." N. E., Reno, Nev.

THE ULTIMATE ACT OF LOVE!

GAL GIVES MOUTH-TO-MOUTH RESUSCITATION — TO AN IGUANA

By LESLIE PHILSON
Weekly World News

LOS ANGELES — A sympathetic Humane Society worker dived into an ice-cold swimming pool to rescue a teenage boy's pet iguana — then saved its life by giving the limp lizard mouth-to-mouth resuscitation!

"When I first got the iguana out of the pool it was alive, but then all of a sudden it just quit breathing and died on me," said heroic Lori Matthews. "Iguanas aren't used to cold temperatures and it was about 45 degrees that day."

So the quick-thinking animal lover made what some would consider the ultimate sacrifice to save the ugly critter's life.

"I thought, 'Well, you do CPR and mouth-to-mouth on a person and on a dog. Why not an iguana?' she said.

So she began ... [illegible] ... water shot out. But I put all the water in my pot and sure enough, it started breathing again."

A veterinarian later gave the iguana a checkup and said it seems to be just fine.

"Now that it has back on its ... was a pretty ugly animal to ... at first," she said. "But at ... I didn't think ... twice about ... I just wanted to save that boy's pet."

Lori had been called to the scene by the iguana's owner, Jeb Abrams, after a dog chased it up a tree. She was trying to coax it down when it tumbled into the pool and she was forced to leap in to save it.

KISS OF LIFE: Lucky iguana was brought back to life after it fell into a swimming pool and died.

CURL UP AND DYE!

Complaining customer gets hate letter from her hairdresser

ANGRY Brandy Vroeman shows her stained $200 silk blouse

By ANTONIA MELANDRO, Foreign Correspondent

ACAPULCO, Mexico — Miffed matron Brandy Lee Vroeman is suing a local beauty shop, claiming she wrote the salon with a minor complaint — and the owner fired back a letter calling [redacted] a [redacted] old biddy!"

"I hope you go to Hell and burn forever," raged the letter, written on the official stationery of Dapper "Do's", a swanky downtown club joint catering to the large community of wealthy Americans who reside in this city. "People like you make trouble just to get attention. You're a demented old biddy. You should have your head examined instead of having your hair done."

Mrs. Vroeman, 54, says she's been going to Dapper "Do's" for 14 years without a single incident. But when a hairdresser accidentally spilled dye on her $200 silk blouse last February 20, she wrote the salon requesting that management reimburse her for the damage.

To her shock and dismay, she says, she received a check from Salvador Ramirez-Tellier, the owner of the salon — along with an unbelievably vicious letter.

"Dear Dagbert," the letter begins. "Here's your stupid check for $200 for that ugly blouse you claim we damaged. Why you couldn't accept a little human error without making such a stupid fuss, I can't imagine. I hope you go to Hell and burn for ever. People like you make trouble just to get attention. You're a demented old biddy and you obviously have nothing important to do with your life or you wouldn't be wasting your time — and ours — with such a stupid complaint.

"We have called every hair salon in Acapulco and warned them that if you stick your ugly nose into their shops, they should throw you out on your butt.

"You should have your head examined instead of having your hair done. You are a sick, disgusting woman."

Mrs. Vroeman says she took the letter to her lawyer and is planning to sue Miss Ramirez-Tellier for defamation of character.

ARE YOU ADDICTED TO LOVE?

By SANDRA LEE

Weekly World News

Take this simple test and find out!

Are you a love slave? You can find out if you're addicted to love by taking this quiz designed by a psychotherapist — who offers advice on how to beat the problem.

"Being addicted to love is one of the most common problems faced by both men and women in the U.S.," declared Dr. Bernard Green, author of Love Slaves: How to End Your Addiction to Another Person.

"Love slaves become unwilling dominants for their partners. They are obsessed with the relationship they're in — even if it's bad."

To find out if you're a love slave, answer these questions, then check the scoring key that follows.

✓Do you feel you can't be happy when you're alone?

✓Do you feel you need a partner to make your life seem fulfilled?

✓Is finding the right mate your most important goal?

✓Do you reluctantly avoid unflattering truth about, or partially the person you love?

✓Do you constantly worry about satisfying your mate?

✓Are you possessive or jealous of others?

✓Do all your hopes and dreams revolve around that person you love?

✓Do you put your mate on a pedestal?

✓Do you have sexual problems, such as frigidity or impotence?

✓Do you try to make your self in pick your mate?

✓Do you constantly fear that the person you love might end the relationship?

✓Do you feel deeply dependent on your mate?

If you have two or three "yes" answers, you're not a love slave. You can have a healthy relationship.

If you have three "yes" answers, you're probably already having relationship problems. If not, you're likely to have them in the future.

If you have four or more "yes" answers, you are a love addict. This problem has already interfered with your relationships, even though you may not realize it.

But even if you're a love addict, don't despair.

"You can overcome love addictions," said Dr. Green. Here are the steps he recommends:

☞ Go over all your good traits to help improve your self-image. For instance, the fact that you're a love slave shows you're a loving person. You just haven't directed that love in a productive way.

☞ Exercise and eat healthy foods. This will help you have the improved feelings you get from being a love slave.

☞ Instead of always doing what your partner wants, start doing what you want. Begin with small things, such as picking a movie.

☞ Take a look at your partners' relationship. How did they treat each other? Are you imitating their marriage in your relationship? If so, do you want to continue living that way?

☞ Spend more time with other people. This will help you realize you're a worthwhile person others enjoy," said Dr. Green.

Millionaire's son hired hit man to kill his family, [illegible] police

By JACK ALEXANDER

FRESNO, Calif. — High-roller Dean Ewell was 200 miles away visiting at the home of an FBI agent when his millionaire dad, his mom and sister were gunned down in cold blood in 1992.

The rich kid seemed to have the perfect alibi for the gruesome, yet brilliantly detective John Souza and his sterling team partners, Kevin Fincher uncovered the ugly evidence — and charged him with the murders.

Allegedly so. This is California! Back in [illegible] when a wrestler asked if he had hired a hit man to kill his dad Dale, 39, his mother Gloria, 37, and sister, Tiffany, 11.

But the relentless, super sleuth police detectives led to the arrests of Ewell and supposed triggerman Joel P. Radovcich, 24, who were jailed without bond on three counts of first degree murder. No charges have been filed against Joel's brother Peter Radovcich, 28 and Jack Dunn, 26 who are supposedly working with authorities in the case.

Dean Ewell thought the rich plant. Three-year surveillance by the two detectives — whom he referred to as Mutt and Jeff — was a joke until his arrest. How You Can Buy Almost Any Drug You Want - Legally - Without a Prescription!

The Secret Doctors and Drug Companies Hope is Never Revealed!

(Special) Did you know you can buy almost any drug you want legally without a prescription? And better still you can save up to 70% off its regular price.

These aren't low quality generic drugs—they are name brand drugs from the big manufacturers.

How can you do this? By taking advantage of a little known, almost secret federal law that allows you to import foreign drugs into the U.S. without a prescription at the cheap prices!

How's this for stupidity? In the law, called the Orphan Drug Act, many drugs, flowers years ago, AIDS activists pressured Congress into allowing AIDS patients to import special drugs into the U.S.

By allowing the availability of all of this, Congress left a loophole in the law allowing almost anyone to import prescription drugs.

Why don't you know about this law? The big drug companies and doctors don't want you to know about it! If the U.S. citizens knew what the prescription drugs were about this law, the greedy doctors and drug companies would lose billions.

Another huge (and potentially life saving) advantage of this law is you can import unapproved drugs Americans drug companies don't even make.

That is really important to anyone who has a rare disease that can be cured by a drug - but is too costly for greedy grubbing American Drug Companies to make.

It's your right to use The Orphan Drug Act and very big money-back possibly your Dr. Marvis put a small sample of the drugs you can save up to 70% on: Tagamet, Inderal, Lasix, AZT, Zantac, Ampicillin, Flagyl, Zyprex, and many more.

How can you find out how to use the law? It's simple. With your permission, I'd like to send you a 340 page book called, How to Buy Almost Any Drug Legally, Without a Prescription.

It's easy to order. Just write your name and address on any piece of paper and mail it along with a check or money order for $12.95 + $1.00 postage and handling to: Advanced Publishing, 717 11th St., #304, Golden, CO 80401. California beauty stalks man who dumped her!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

SANTA ANA, Calif. — Spurned beauty Robyn Devereaux is accused of stalking, threatening and harassing the man who dumped her.

Prosecutors say even a court order couldn't stop the ex-paralegal from venting her wrath against the 36-year-old man who ended their brief romance.

"She apparently couldn't accept 'no' for an answer," Deputy Prosecutor Tom Glazier said.

"The situation went downhill fast after he broke off their relationship."

Miss Devereaux, Jr. is charged with three counts of stalking and four counts of making harassing phone calls. She pleaded not guilty and was released on her own recognizance pending the trial.

Glazier would not give details of the stalking. "Evidence of that will come out at the trial," he remarked.

"It's absolutely absurd. There's no merit to any of these charges," Miss Devereaux said.

But prosecutors claim her scorn went beyond the boyfriend, who wasn't identified.

She threatened his job, to burn down his house and to "get" his young son, prosecutors say. From 1993 to 1994, she made at least 100 phone calls to him at work and 100 calls to his brother, according to police detective Mark Hanlon.

The doomed romance began in 1987 when she phoned the man at his home. Three days passed [illegible] talked to each other over the phone for several months. They exchanged gifts by mail and later agreed to meet. Shortly after their rendezvous, the man ended the relationship.

That's when the stalking and the harassing phone calls to the man, his brother, his parents and a neighbor began, cops said.

The former boyfriend eventually went to court and got a restraining order against her in 1990. But prosecutors say the harassing phone calls and stalking continued.

"She appears to be an obsessed woman who is out of control," prosecutor Glazier said. "The court has to impress upon this woman the seriousness of her actions."

Creeps torture co-worker with electronic dog collar!

ROCKY MOUNT, Va. — Three wise guys tricked a co-worker into wearing an electronic dog collar by telling him it was a revolutionary new lie detector.

"He wore the danged thing for several minutes as they fired questions at him," a cop reported.

"When they thought he'd lied, one of the men pressed a [redacted] button and zapped him through the collar."

Factory worker James O'Neal said he was terrified but not injured by the electrical jolt from the collar, police said.

Having their collish fun at O'Neal's expense were Ricky Moore, Charles English and Scott Smith, all employees at MW Manufacturing Inc., a window-manufacturing plant here.

Moore brought out the dog collar during a work break. O'Neal testified in court the three co-workers told him the collar was a lie detector.

"The three men asked O'Neal some questions and delivered the electrical shock on the fourth question," Police Chief R.B. Jenkins said. "It was a cruel joke."

Judge George Jones found Moore, English and Smith guilty of misdemeanor assault and fined them $100 each. They were given suspended 10-day jail sentences.

Be an INSTANT hit by using the right body language!

By SUSAN JAMISON, Staff writer

You can be a hit with others the moment you meet them — just by following a few simple tips on using body language to make a great impression, experts say.

They base their advice on research that shows other people judge us instantly, reacting unconsciously to the power we project through our posture, gestures and movements.

"People can't see your problems — they can only see you," says Lynn Pearl, head of the Chicago consulting firm Executive Communication Inc. "That's why awareness of the nonverbal signals you send gives you a leg up."

"As much as 93 percent of communication is nonverbal," agreed Dr Marilyn Maple, a University of Florida professor of education. "Body language is the oldest, most trusted language in the world."

Weekly World News canvassed experts from around the country for their advice on using body language to get ahead. Heeds what they say:

DO

● Stand Tall. Successful people appear large, strong and relaxed. An erect, confident posture tells others that you are self-assured and honest.

● Look Others In the Eye. Don't stare, but do meet the gaze of others. They'll see you as composed and sincere.

● Signal a Friendly Greeting. Briefly lift your eyebrows to acknowledge an encounter or introduction. It makes you look lively, alert and interested in others.

● Monitor Reactions. Other people will address with their body language whether they like you, whether they are interested in what you are saying, etc.

DON'T

● Offer a Wimpy Handshake. Successful [illegible] like a firm clasp. fingers and thumb vertical, then relaxed. Avoid sweaty palms.

● Stand Too Close. People have a natural sense of distance and are [illegible] if you stand too close. Show respect for personal boundaries.

● Block Others Out. Crossing your arms, leaning back, glancing around the room instead of giving eye contact — these are ways of telling others you're not interested.

HOMEOWNERS FORCED TO INSTALL INDOOR TOILETS — FOR THEIR DOGS!

GENCK, Belgium — Persnickety officials here have enacted an ordinance requiring homeowners to install indoor toilets — for their dogs!

Council members passed the bizarre law after announcing they were sick of seeing pooches fouling the tree-lined streets in this picturesque town of 13,000.

Officials say they're confident that dog owners can train their pets to use plastic chamber pots like cats use litter boxes — but bewildered pet lovers insist their chip fathers are barking up the wrong tree.

"I just got my dog trained to go potty outside, and now they want me to train him to go in the house," said flustered housewife Dominique Wells.

ECCENTRIC businessman Overton Closson left himself to his dogs.

'CHOP ME UP & FEED ME TO MY DOGS!'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Accident victim Denton Closson wanted his body to serve a useful purpose after he died — so he ordered that his corpse be fed to his dogs!

The eccentric businessman told friends that he enjoyed the thought of making his Labrador retrievers fatter and happier happy and crunchy! Think of a better way to use the prime of his remains after his spirit had gone on to Heaven!

"When he told us he didn't want all ordinary burials, we urged him to save his body to science," said a close friend of the 71-year-old man. Closson, who lived alone, bought Bobo and Baxter 12 years ago when they were puppies and took them everywhere with him. A wealthy man, he pampered his pooches and depended on them for company.

Peekaboo ghost!

Spirit of kindly old lady has watched over Georgia family since 1962!

By SUSAN JAMISON
Staff writer

EATONTON, Ga. — Betty Right and her husband Robert live together in their country home, but although their two kids have moved away, they're not alone because the ghost of a little old lady lives with them!

The gentle spirit roams the couple's house at will and Betty swears a harpsichord-playing ghost can also be seen.

She says the bonnet-wearing figure is the ghost of Samantha King who was struck by lightning while sitting by her fireplace with her son killed in 1929.

"She protects us like a grandmother would," says Betty, a housewife. "She doesn't bother us, but every now and then she gets upset and starts running and moving around making noise and moving things.

"She was so ready at first that we built a new house to get away from her a few years back, but the day we moved the ropes in, Sister Dear she's spunked down a bit and she's a cute little old lady, really. She's dressed in a long brown dress and she always wears a hat. No one has ever seen her face."

Betty says she first spotted the ghost in 1982 when she and her family moved to the house where Samantha King had lived and died. The spirit was standing in the garden outside the kitchen window, but when Betty went outside it was gone.

Since then, the ghost has been a constant companion, running the yard and house day and night, opening and closing doors, moving through the hallways and keeping an eye on things.

"She saved my life the other day," Betty told the NEWS. "I was real happy and I got in the car to go somewhere and I realized I wasn't alone. I got out of the car to look around and I heard a voice say, 'Don't get in that car.' I could feel someone there. I could feel the breath on my neck.

"I drove down the drive at most to where it enters a big highway, and two enormous trucks went by at very high speed right in front of me. I realized that if I had not been delayed looking for the ghost, I would have pulled out in the big right into the path of the trucks and died in a terrible wreck. The ghost saved my life."

Betty says the watchful ghost turns the yard lights on to light their way when they arrive home after dark. If anything unusual happens in the house or the land around it, the old lady's spirit can be seen checking it out.

"She's like a loving member of the family."

Betty Right looks through the kitchen window where Samantha King was struck by lightning in 1929.

New evidence confirms:

BIRTH ORDER REALLY DOES SHAPE YOUR PERSONALITY

By BARRY CLAYTON
Special correspondent

WASHINGTON — You can find out everything you need to know about your bosses and co-workers and take advantage of their weaknesses simply by asking if they had brothers or sisters — and the order in which they were born!

Dr. Talbott

So say researchers who have found that birth order and family size shape personality, character and behavior, giving people specific traits that can be exploited — in your bosses — on the job.

"Firstborns, middle children, only children, babies of the family — everybody fits into one of these categories, and everybody is shaped by the category they fall in," Dr. Martin Talbott, author of the startling new book Birth And Consequences, told reporters.

"Through social and psychological studies, we have been able to determine certain similar strengths and weaknesses of people who share the same birth order.

"By knowing all these strengths and weaknesses, you can better understand the people you work with. And in today's highly competitive workplace, you can use this knowledge to get ahead."

Here are the four guidlines of birth and traits for each one. To apply them on the job, just ask the people you work with the order in which they were born.

● Firstborns tend to be raised as "mini" regardless of their sex. They are reared with specific duties, responsibilities and expectations. They often rise quickly on the job and assume supervisory roles. Firstborns are vain and are highly susceptible to flattery, no matter how ridiculous or misplaced. Firstborns are gullible and will believe just about anything you say — if you insist that the information is true.

● Middle children tend to be good kids who don't get into trouble. They're never going to be last — but they're never going to be first, either in the workplace, they don't need much guidance — but they do need lots of attention. Praise promises of promotions and raises will motivate them to work extremely hard and happily give the credit to you. Middle children often lack self-esteem and will do ANYTHING for people who can help them feel better about themselves.

● Babies of the family tend to be creative, rebellious and spoiled. At work, they're not comfortable with close supervision. Suspicious by nature, it's easy to set them against co-workers, creating infighting, bad atmosphere and diversions you can use to get ahead on the job.

● Only children tend to be much like the baby rebellious and creative. They don't like to be held accountable for their actions and are used to getting their own way. Promise them the moon and don't worry about delivering. They can't deal with frustration, and are apt to quit a job rather than fight to make it better.

AMAZING NEW VITAMIN

- FIGHTS DEPRESSION
- HELPS WEIGHT LOSS
- CURES IMPOTENCE
- LOWERS CHOLESTEROL

...and the miracle nut
3 common vegetables:

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Researchers have discovered a new vitamin called Vitamin T-2 that boosts energy, alleviates stress, cures a host of common ailments — and makes people completely happy with their lives!

The miracle nutrient can be consumed in sufficient amounts by eating about three servings daily of radishes, turnips or garlic. Scientists say they hope to synthesize the new vitamin in the laboratory soon and make it available in pill form to consumers.

By LILA SCHVANDT
Correspondent in Europe

"This is the most amazing substance in nature, absolutely the most powerful vitamin we've ever studied," said Dr. Hans Vogensen, a biochemist and physician at the University of Copenhagen Medical School who headed up a five-year study of the compound. "A small amount every day has dramatic effects on human health and mood.

"I have seen ailing men and women transformed into robust, energetic and contented individuals in a matter of days after exposure to Vitamin T-2. I've seen depressed individuals find new enthusiasm for life. I've seen exhausted, stressed-out workers regain their vitality in just a few hours. This compound is amazing, just amazing."

The noted scientist and four colleagues first discovered Vitamin T-2 while investigating the miraculous curative powers of garlic.

They isolated the previously unknown substance, extracted it for further study and concluded it was the active ingredient that provided the well-known health benefits of garlic. Subsequently, the chemical was isolated in turnips and radishes as well. In a study involving 4,000 male and female volunteers, the scientists noticed a dramatic change after small doses of Vitamin T-2 were added to the daily diet.

Following is a list of some of the miracle benefits of Vitamin T-2 that Dr. Vogensen and his colleagues discovered in their history-making study.

The scientists strongly recommend consulting your physician before making any significant changes in your diet.

■ DEPRESSION: A serving of six ounces of radish or turnip or three garlic cloves a day has a powerful effect on mood, the doctors found. Subjects felt happy and optimistic and were able to accept setbacks with good humor.

■ HEART TROUBLE: Vitamin T-2 significantly affects cholesterol levels, actually

HOW TO KEEP FROM GETTING MUGGED

...and other personal safety tips

You can avoid being threatened by a potentially violent person — or keep yourself from being hurt if a confrontation does take place — by following the advice of two experts.

First, don't get drawn into conversations with strangers who stop you on the street or anywhere else. Muggers often begin by asking you for a light, the time of day or a dollar — and if you respond, they view you as a "pigeon." If you're accosted in this manner, either ignore the person or especially in a strange neighborhood — be wary of anyone loitering near you who appears to be with someone else lurking in the background. Muggers often work in groups of two or more.

Watch out for people who stop more than once to tie their shoes in a short period of time. This is a favorite device of muggers to "buy time" while they size up potential victims.

In one study, criminals were observed tying their shoelaces five or six times in one block before carrying out a crime.

that's bulging out of your pocket, or with your handbag swinging loosely on your wrist. This increases your odds of becoming a target.

It's a good idea to carry a second wallet, with only a few dollars inside. If you're robbed, hand the wallet to the thief, saying, "Here — take it and let me go!"

Usually a mugger will take the wallet and run.

Another way to get out of a confrontation is to raise a commotion. Scream at the top of your voice.

But don't simply shout "Help" — if you're a woman, onlookers might clearing up clogged veins over a period of a few weeks. Subjects experienced a 5% percent reduction in hardening of the arteries after two months.

● IMPOTENCE: Men who ate three 1-ounce servings of radishes or turnips daily or who consumed two garlic cloves daily found their sexual performances improved markedly.

Subjects reported firmer erections and greater endurance after just a few days on the Vitamin T-2 regimen.

● ARTHRITIS: Positives made of any of the three Vitamin T-2 vegetables appeared to have dramatic effects on swollen and aching joints. The poultices should be applied in the morning and evening. Benefits should be apparent within five or six days.

● FATIGUE: A strong tea made with one tablespoon of grated garlic, radish or turnip steeped in a cup of boiling water will provide a powerful energy boost. Take as often as needed to beat fatigue.

● ANXIETY OR STRESS: Vitamin T-2 is nature's perfect tranquilizer. To enjoy its benefits, simply consume a daily portion of eight ounces of radish or turnip or four garlic cloves. The relaxing effects should be noticeable within hours.

● HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE: Blood pressure levels plummeted among subjects who were given regular doses of Vitamin T-2.

A simple broth made by boiling two tablespoons of any of the three vegetables in one cup of water for 10 minutes proved to dramatically reduce high blood pressure over a one-week period.

● CANCER: Preliminary studies strongly indicate a regimen of at least two ounces of one of the raw, grated vegetables every day showed especially strong immune systems and tests revealed extremely low levels of cancer cells in their blood streams.

● WEIGHT LOSS: Even trace amounts of Vitamin T-2 were found to have an impact on the way the body processes fat, the researchers discovered. By eating just a tablespoon a day of fresh, grated vegetables, subjects experienced a steady weight loss that resulted in a total decline of up to 10 pounds in two weeks.

● AGING: Daily consumption of a tea made by boiling together two crushed garlic cloves and one tablespoon each of radish and turnip has a dramatic effect on the aging process.

Subjects who drank at least a cup of the tea every morning or evening reported a marked reduction in wrinkling, darkening of hair and the elimination of age-related aches and pains.

"After a year of Vitamin T-2, these people looked much

Moviegoers thought dead usher was a wax dummy!
